The 1994 travel survey<sup>1</sup> revealed that 10% of the population in England and Wales had a long-term health problem.

The Department estimates that this will increase to 12% by 2000. In addition, many people will have more than one long-term condition. As a result, the authors conclude that the use of the "one-size-fits-all" approach to the treatment of patients with bipolar disorder is not optimal. They suggest that a more individualized approach, taking into account the patient's clinical history, current status, and response to treatment, is needed to achieve the best outcomes.

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were 15 women, 40 to 50 years of age, who were sedentary and had no cardiovascular or pulmonary disease. They were randomly assigned to a 10-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise at 60% of maximum HR. The control group did not exercise. The HR and EE were measured at rest and during exercise at the beginning and end of the 10-week period. The results showed that the training program had a significant effect on the HR and EE of the subjects. The HR and EE were significantly lower at rest and during exercise at the end of the 10-week period compared to the beginning. The control group showed no significant change in HR and EE. The results suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the cardiovascular and metabolic fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women.

They believe that the MFF should remain an independent entity, representing the interests of Mindanao football players and clubs. The proposed merger has been a topic of debate for some time, with some arguing that it would strengthen the national football structure, while others, like the group of leaders mentioned, see it as a threat to the MFF's independence.

The National Commission on the Status of Women has published a report that says that women are still not equal to men in the workplace. The report says that women are paid less than men for the same work, and that they are not given the same opportunities for advancement. The report also says that women are often discriminated against in the workplace. The report is a call to action for the government and the private sector to take steps to ensure that women are treated equally in the workplace.
